Tye began his banking career in 2008 with a community bank in the Oklahoma Panhandle where he was the Branch Manager before moving to Liberty National Bank in 2016.

Tye was raised on a small family ranch in West Texas where his family operated a commercial cow/calf herd and owned a small irrigated and dryland farm where they developed replacement heifers and ran seasonal cattle. He continues that tradition today in Southwest Oklahoma.

Tye has always been a strong advocate of education and community service which continues today with his position on Agriculture Advisory Boards and supports work with local universities and extension groups. He enjoys working with producers that range from first generational start-ups to some of the largest diversified producers in the country.

Tye specialties include financial analysis, cash flow projections, concept design and program development to name a few. He holds a Bachelor Degree of Business Administration in Management and a Master of Business Administration from West Texas A&M University. He also graduated from Western States School of Banking from the New Mexico State University.
